Explanation:

* WAN-IFRA CH = former IFRA
  WAN-IFRA CH consolidated = Association, GmbH and subsidiaries

 WAN-IFRA FR = former WAN
  WAN-IFRA FR consolidated = Association and SARL
It’s been more than a year since the merger that created the World Association of Newspapers and News Publishers (WAN-IFRA), and the global newspaper industry has shown unprecedented support for the future of our business, and WAN-IFRA’s central role as the world-wide representative body of the industry.

Dozens of newspaper companies have pledged both financial and strategic support to WAN-IFRA, as the new organisation sets a new direction to better serve an industry facing major challenges and opportunities. This support, which will allow us to reorganise and further the work of WAN-IFRA, is immensely gratifying and shows a deep commitment to the values of the organisation.

It also shows a deep confidence in the future of our industry and in WAN-IFRA to meet the challenges of a multi-media age.

In fact, WAN-IFRA’s expertise is more needed than ever. With the rapid changes occurring in our industry, it is difficult for individual companies to stay abreast of all significant developments – particularly those that occur in other markets. WAN-IFRA can dedicate the necessary resources, and its network and global reach has great value to newspaper companies everywhere.

This value is reflected in the wide array of conferences, seminars and strategy reports organised and published by WAN-IFRA – more than 80 events a year, held on all continents, providing insight and advice on all issues of importance to our business. After a crisis year caused by the global economic meltdown, which forced the cancellation of the World Newspaper Congress, participation is once again climbing; visitors to the IFRA Expo in Hamburg this year will be well above last year’s participation and the World Editors Forum expects record participation.

At the same time, there is growing recognition among the press development community of WAN-IFRA’s ability to help build and support viable independent media in the developing world, an essential condition for sustainable democracy. Thanks to significant donations from the Swedish International Development Agency, the Danish Foreign Ministry, the European Union and others, WAN-IFRA has expanded its work to defend and promote press freedom, and to ensure the economic independence of media as an essential condition of that freedom.

This is not to say that the organisation, and the industry as a whole, does not continue to face serious challenges. Advertising revenues, both in print and online, have suffered serious declines in much of the world. Circulations remain under pressure. Cost-cutting programmes have been implemented and personnel reduced in many media houses. The structural changes in our industry combined with the financial and economic crisis has made the challenges facing management at publishing houses especially demanding.

The merger of the World Association of Newspapers and IFRA has brought together the virtues of the two organisations to create an even more influential organisation for the news publishing industry. The merger will allow us to more effectively identify and satisfy the needs of our members, and the industry as a whole.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank my colleagues on the Board as well as all the members of the various Committees who, despite heavy workloads at their own companies, spared neither time, cost, nor effort to contribute to the realisation of the merger.

Furthermore, I wish to express my deep gratitude towards the management of both organisations, especially both CEOs and the Integration Teams, for their invaluable contribution, made under difficult circumstances, towards achieving the merger.

We will all benefit in the future from a strong organisation.

Gavin O’Reilly
This merger is, indeed, a landmark occasion because it will usher in a truly global organisation of the publishing industry.

In mid-2009, WAN-IFRA was formally founded by the merger of the two predecessor associations. Up to February 2010, the two former CEOs of WAN and of IFRA acted jointly as Co-CEOs to manage the merged association. In February 2010 Christoph Riess assumed leadership as the new and sole CEO, thus ending the period of joint management.

REPORT OF THE CEO WAN-IFRA CH

The reorganisation and merger with the World Association of Newspapers, WAN, initiated in 2008, determined the agenda in 2009, a year in which the effects of the crisis were felt also by WAN-IFRA CH.

After the reorganisation, which included significant job losses and the creation of competence centres focused on our core target groups in November/December 2008, the emphasis at the beginning of 2009 was placed firmly on the implementation and integration of the new processes. It can be stated right away that, despite the reduced team, all events and training sessions scheduled for 2009 were carried out without exception.

As could be expected, all events, be they conferences or training sessions, but first and foremost the IFRA Expo, were effected by the crisis. Especially international events and training courses held at our headquarters in Darmstadt felt the consequences. In contrast, the levels of participation in national events and customised training sessions were higher than budgeted. This is where the good relations with national associations and important customers, built up and cultivated over many years, bore fruit.

IFRA Expo recorded a considerable drop in the number of exhibitors in the crisis year, and consequently reduced income from sales of exhibition floor space. Despite major efforts, the number of visitors also failed to meet expectations. Advertising revenues were also below budget.

Nevertheless, it proved possible to achieve a slightly higher than budgeted turnover and, despite massive writedowns of uncollectible receivables, an almost balanced operating result was reached.

The number of members remained largely constant – 27 new members as opposed to 26 cancellations of membership. The main reason for cancellation was the economic situation of the companies concerned.

For the first time, after many years of investing heavily in research, we were compelled to cut our expenditure on research. As a result, the number of new reports was considerably lower than in previous years.

Moreover, much of management's attention was focused on the preparation and realisation of the merger with WAN.

Similarly, 2009 was not an easy year for our subsidiaries, as especially the European subsidiaries felt the full effects of the crisis.

All European subsidiaries suffered operating losses, though these proved to be moderate in France due to the excellent revenues achieved in the training area. In contrast, Asia, with the subsidiaries in Chennai and Singapore, recorded major profits, thus helping the organisation to achieve the aforementioned almost balanced result.

I wish to take this opportunity to thank the board and all Committees for their valuable support of the organisation. Their practical assistance as well as many impulses and ideas were greatly appreciated.

The year 2010 will not be any easier. But the now merged organisation must return its focus to its actual tasks. We will work energetically towards achieving our goals.

REPORT OF THE CEO WAN-IFRA FR

As the mirror image of the global newspaper industry and its fortunes, for good or bad, WAN-IFRA FR had a very tough year in 2009, with a significant drop in revenues as news publishers everywhere were forced to slash their budgets for international organizations. Originally planned for March, the World Newspaper Congress and World Editors Forum even had to be postponed, as newspapers endeavoured to come to terms with drastic falls in their revenues and the world economic crisis took its toll. Thankfully and owing to major efforts by our Indian colleagues, the events were, however, ‘rescued’ and took place, with immense success, at the end of the year in Hyderabad.

The challenges of 2009 were compounded, for staff - cut in number by 25 % to reduce costs - and elected representatives both, by the complex process of merging with IFRA – decided early in the year, finalized formally in July, and the subject of intense integration efforts for the rest of the year.

Despite the turbulences of these difficult twelve months, I believe that the organization nevertheless fulfilled its mission of defending the business and professional interests of the global news publishing industry and helping newspapers develop strategies for a prosperous future.

In compliance with its permanent and overriding mission of defending and promoting freedom of the press, WAN-IFRA FR campaigned relentlessly to protect news publishers faced with hostility and repression all over the world: 99 journalists were murdered during the year and more than 850 arrested and jailed. This ‘militant’, day-to-day programme of highlighting, protesting and investigating attacks on the press was once more accompanied by a range of media development projects aimed to strengthen the independence and viability of newspapers in developing nations and those where the press is a constant victim of political, economic and judicial harassment.

WAN-IFRA FR has long embraced the mission of aiding newspapers to ensure a future generation of readers, with our Young Reader Development Programme, which was active all round the world in 2009 introducing Newspapers in Education projects in more and more developing countries and facilitating the exchange of information and ideas to help newspapers everywhere capture a teenage and young adult audience.

Through its Shaping the Future of the Newspaper research project and a range of seminars, conferences, surveys, study tours and publications, WAN-IFRA FR continued to track trends in the industry and to bring leading-edge ideas and information to news publishers about potential scenarios ahead.

The World Editors Forum, the organization’s division to serve senior news executives, saw a 50 % drop in its revenues in 2009 as newsroom budgets everywhere were slashed to compensate for the effects of the economic crisis and editors saw their travel and conference funds greatly reduced or frozen. The Forum profited from this lull in traditional training investments to develop its consultancy services and partnerships and to invest in preparations for an aggressive new digital strategy of webinars and e-consulting in 2010.

The merger of WAN and IFRA put great strains on the communications department during the year, with the need to create one common image for the new joint organization, to integrate web and publicity activities and to support marketing and sales efforts to clarify the services and programmes of the two former associations in a challenging economic environment.

The public affairs agenda of the organization in 2009 was again dominated by two issues of importance to the business interests of newspapers: ACAP and sports rights. The Automated Content Access Protocol, a tool designed to permit news publishers to better protect their online content, was adopted by hundreds more newspapers and took the total to over 1,900. The chief focus of the sports rights initiatives was the 2010 soccer World Cup and intense negotiations with FIFA to greatly improve the conditions of coverage by news publishers.

The staff and elected leaders of WAN-IFRA FR deserve praise and thanks for working tirelessly to help the organization accomplish its mission in this unprecedentedly difficult year.

Outlook 2010: Create a stable financial basis, bring together the different areas of the association, develop a strategic plan for the future.

REPORT OF THE CEO

It has been a period of reorganisation and transition for the World Association of Newspapers and News Publishers (WAN-IFRA), since its creation in July 2009 from the merger of the World Association of Newspapers and IFRA.

From its inception until February 2010, the organisation was directed by co-CEOs, in the Paris and Darmstadt headquarters, with areas and departments acting in parallel and in a coordinated manner.

The appointment of a single CEO in February allowed us to accelerate the process of creating a new, modern organisation that takes advantage of the synergies and efficiencies emerging from the merger. WAN-IFRA, which represents more than 18,000 publications, over 15,000 websites as well as more than 3,000 publishing houses, manufacturers and service providers, is now positioned to become the leading organisation of news publishing in the 21st century.

The most urgent task was to establish a solid financial basis. Like its members, WAN-IFRA had to contend with a global economic crisis that had a profound impact on its business, particularly on the level of participation at our conferences and events. In addition to economic factors, some major events had to be postponed or relocated due to unstable political conditions or as a result of natural phenomena outside of our control. The World Newspaper Congress had to be cancelled. These events resulted in an exceptional strain on the association’s business, forcing the adoption of cost-cutting measures, including corresponding personnel adjustments.

Fortunately, our members re-committed themselves to the future of the industry, and to our organisation as its global representative. Newspaper companies and associations alike have made substantial financial contributions in recent weeks, which will allow WAN-IFRA to re-organise and to pursue a business strategy to better serve its members and the industry as a whole.

There are encouraging signs that the business environment is improving. The preparations for the IFRA Expo in October, held this year in Hamburg, are showing positive tendencies. The number of exhibitors and visitors continues to rise and the range of topics covered is increasing. We are directing all our efforts towards ensuring that the Expo, along with the World Editors Forum, which is being held concurrently, will be a major success. The tasks facing us in shaping the future of the association are to increase efficiency as well as to implement a strategy of further growth through the introduction of new business segments in the future.

The synergies I see: Firstly, an ability to clearly express the importance of a vibrant newspaper industry to the growth of democratic rights around the world, and to the vital difference that free debate of issues make to our society. Secondly, the technical expertise and business acumen of IFRA is a good counterpart to WAN’s leadership status in supporting press freedom. It will be a challenge to blend the different cultures of the two organisations, but the pressures on every one’s own business will be the strongest driver of that imperative. This HAS to work so that our industry portrays a much stronger image to the watching world.

The Board decides upon major strategic issues and approves the accounts before ratification at the General Assembly. The Board is composed of members elected by the General Assembly.

The Executive Committee directs and supervises the Association and represents it with regard to third parties. The Executive Committee elects members to the Steering Group.

The Steering Group is a working group within the Executive Committee that guides day-to-day operations of WAN-IFRA.

The Advisory Council is within WAN-IFRA the committee, which initiates and supervises the research work of the organisation. The Advisory Council consists of delegates of the regional committees as well as delegates of the technical committees. Regional as well as technical committees are permanent. Members can be proposed by the committee or by members of the WAN-IFRA Advisory Council and are elected by the committees themselves. The chairperson of the Advisory Council is a permanent member of the Executive Committee.
